

Zero to Hero Workout of the Week

Welcome to DIVEFITNESS.com's Zero to Hero workout of the week. This schedule is designed to get you into the habit of regular exercise with minimal time commitment. Be sure to complete the PAR-Q found on the website and follow its recommendations before proceeding.

Cardiovascular Training

The cardiovascular exercise listed below can be anything you feel like doing to get your heart rate up for the time indicated (walking/running, cycling, swimming, etc.). Start each session slowly and gradually work up to the specified intensity. Stop immediately if you feel dizzy or unusual, and notify a medical professional.

Flexibility Training

Stretching should be done immediately after your cardiovascular activity. The stretches can be found in the articles listed at DIVEFITNESS.com. Start with your calves and work your way up your legs and torso, finishing with the stretches for shoulders.

Strength Training

The strength exercises are designed to be performed in just about any size fitness facility or home gym. You can substitute exercises based upon available equipment and desired variety. Just stick to the body parts and the general theme, where possible.

If you can't complete the given set of push-ups or crunches, remain in position, rest as little as possible and do as many more as you can. Repeat this cycle until you have completed two sets.

Perform two sets of each remaining exercise with twelve to fifteen repetitions each set. Pick a weight that pushes you to failure by the last repetition of each set. If you are unfamiliar with the proper technique of an exercise, seek the guidance of a qualified fitness professional.

Keeping Track

Print out the following pages to record your workouts and keep them in a binder. This will help you to measure your progress over time.
